WELCOME TO MACON...

the heart of Georgia and the historical crossroads of the South. Macon is a city with a rich cultural heritage and strong vision for the future. Macon offers the amenities of a small friendly city with the advantages of a growing city. Cultural, social, civic, and educational opportunities create an excellent quality of life. Macon is known as the "Cherry Blossom Capital of the World" with over 275,000 Yoshino Cherry trees.

Macon lies near the geographic center of Georgia, approximately 80 miles (129 km) south of Atlanta, hence the city's nickname as the Heart of Georgia. It is located between Metro Atlanta, Augusta, Savannah, and Albany. Macon is a part of the Historic South, "an area which mixes a rich cultural heritage of music and literature with bountiful agriculture, landmarks of the past, and a calendar filled with entertaining festivals of all sorts." It is among the top five largest metropolitan areas in Georgia, and the county seat of Bibb County, GA. As of the 2000 Census, Macon had a city proper population of 97,255, and a metropolitan population of 228,712 (2005).

Macon is a hotspot for tourists not only because of its exceptional climate and its central location, but also because of its scenic attractions. It is home to ten historic districts, including Cherokee Heights, East Macon, Macon, Macon Railroad, Pleasant Hill, Shirley Hills, Vineville, Fort Hill, North Highlands, and Tindall Heights. Macon showcases the Hay House, the Old Cannonball House, Sidney Lanier Cottage, Jarrell Plantation and Terminal Station. Tourists and natives alike are welcome to enjoy the history of Rose Hill Cemetery or the old-fashioned Douglass Theatre. What's more, history is not limited to monuments, architecture, and gravestones. Macon also features the Georgia Music Hall of Fame, the Georgia Sports Hall of Fame, the Museum of Arts & Sciences, and the Harriet Tubman African American Museum.
